Coach Corner: "Humility"

by Scott Richter

You have all heard the phrase "pride comes before a fall." In juggling, I'd venture to say that pride comes before a drop. As students that are participants in a very unique skill, you all face a great challenge before you; the ability to remain humble while striving for excellence. I am sure many of you have been called "show-offs" or have been deemed "the center of attention" by your friends and family because of your uniqueness in knowing how to juggle. My encouragement to you all is to never let your skills and abilities become more important than your friendships and relational interactions. James 4:6 reads "But he gives us more grace. That is why Scripture says: 'God opposes the proud but shows favor to the humble'" (NIV).

I think we would all agree that no one likes to be around a prideful person. Make your time at club enjoyable by working hard at juggling while at the same time you consider your fellow club members' needs before your own. My pastor, Joel Johnson, recently shared a thought on this that I found illuminating in my own life. He said, "Humility is not thinking less of yourself, but simply thinking of yourself less." Be kids and young adults who look to the needs of others first. Not only will it make your time here at JH the best it can be, it will also be a treasure for you to take with you wherever you go. Coach Scott

CLUB SPOTLIGHT: Advanced Club

Mid-week, mid-level club an end in itself

Advanced Club has always had a sweet spirit about it. Maybe this is due to the mixture of younger middle schoolers with H.S. upperclassmen; the ever-creative JJ routines; the mid-week release of an active club among many other activities (e.g., family, church, school, sports, and music); or the self-fulfilling prophecy that the kids who join Advanced expect it to be an extra-special place of bonding, challenges, and social acceptance--thereby helping to perpetuate the success. For some, Advanced is a stepping stone en route to Elite & Ultimate; for others, it's an end in itself, whether as a 2nd juggling day for U.C. members (instead of Elite), or as "home" to several who finish their Jughead careers here. Whatever the reason(s), Adv. Club remains one of the most balanced, meaningful, and fun glimpses into our company.

Paul's Platform: "Mentorship Multiplied"

Since I'm an undisciplined person by nature, I need exert extra effort to conquer certain fundamental tasks such as fitness, proper nutrition, and even daily flossing. (I now practice all three daily, but it took me many cavities and many weight fluctuations to come to the point where I perform these disciplines as a matter of non-negotiable, second-nature, daily routine.) In fact, I'm developing a list of about 10 categories of personal disciplines--but more on that later. My point is that some disciplines are easily quantifiable (e.g., running mileage, minutes of music practice), while others are much harder to define or measure (e.g., time invested in a marriage or in a child). It is the general area of mentorship to which I feel called to step up my personal discipline efforts.

Give or take, I have 28 nieces & nephews, a grand-nephew, and 150 Jugheads, plus friends' kids and young adults (including 39 Jughead grads) whom I know on various levels of trust and intimacy. To be blunt, Wendy & I feel like we could easily make a full-time job out of loving various people in our lives who have needs ranging from simple encouragement to survival skills. While Wendy & I were investing time with an 18-year-old family friend this fall, I quipped to the young lady that I have to make a conscious choice to spend time even in casual conversations, lest I allow my personal disciplines (and need for down time) to unduly dominate my schedule. In other words, whether socializing with my relatives or going out of my way for an adolescent or young adult, I need to discipline myself to make mentorship a habit.

One prayer of late is that as I endeavor to mentor others (esp. Jughead leaders and other assorted 15-25 year-olds, as they are open to it), they will in turn be fruitful in their own efforts to pass mentorship along to others. Mentorship is not always convenient, but what a harvest of peace and righteousness is yielded when we invest our time, talents, and treasures in people rather than only in self-focused pursuits! I don't aim to give up on my seemingly "self-centered" disciplines, but I'll multiply my disciplines by increasing my bold & deliberate mentorship of others--with hopes that a little investment will go a long way.
